Oklahoma Cities in Organized Baseball

Western league—Tulsa and Oklahoma City.
Western association—Holt, Oklahoma City, Muskogee, Bartlesville, Sapulpa and Miami.
Kansas-Oklahoma league—Arkansas City, Ponca City, Blackwell and Nowata.

By LARRY DAILY

The years recognized as one of the "boom" states in the organized baseball industry this season will probably be represented by more cities in organized baseball than any other state. Thirteen and possibly 14 cities will be enrolled this year in four different leagues at Tulsa, Muskogee, Bartlesville, Sapulpa and Miami. The recently reorganized Kansas-Oklahoma league includes Ardmore of this state.

If the Kansas-Oklahoma league is formed as planned by its backers, it will include Ponca City, Blackwell and Nowata, Oklahoma. This league is in a tentative state now, but indications are that it will be organized.

KANSAS-OKLAHOMA MAY BE ORGANIZED SOON

Special to The World.
PONCA CITY, Feb. 20.—The organization of the Kansas-Oklahoma baseball league, a class D circuit, is being discussed in several cities of northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas, forming a compact league where the jump would be short and the entire circuit could be made by automobile if desired.

No permanent organization has been formed thus far, although J. E. Grady of St. Louis has been visiting the several cities and getting sentiment in regard to professional baseball.

Oklahoma towns being considered are Ponca City, Blackwell, and Nowata, Arkansas City, Winfield and Wellington in Kansas. All are good sports towns accustomed to having good baseball teams that are sending good men into professional baseball annually. The towns are close together, with good roads and the general opinion is that a class D league can be operated successfully.
